SUMMARY: Dr. Gregory discusses relationships between various concerns in psychology, focusing on perception and illusion. He describes the influence of early pioneers on his own research and considers controversial issues in the area of language learning. He concludes with an outline of psycholinguistics and the notion of deep structure.

SUMMARY: We should abandon our foreign policy in favor of a coherent policy that would encourage other nations to participate more in the world community. We should stop trying to insure our military primacy and seek a more equal distribution of power in the world.
